

NEW ENGLAND... THE JERSEY COAST

The coming season is expected to be an active one in the American resort world, and that summer traffic rivaling or exceeding in volume that of previous years is anticipated in New England is indicated by the accommodations provided for it in the vacation territory of southern New England, as shown in the 1914 edition of the "Manual of Summer Resorts."

Nearly every sort of vacation preference can be suited in this New England territory, situated within a few hours ride of the great population centres of New England and the middle Atlantic States. Here are picturesque mountains, Dwight Church and the Misses Church, Thaw 3d and family.

ASBURY PARK, N. J.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., May 29.—A new season was formally opened in Asbury Park today. There were crowds of visitors on the boardwalk, on the golf links, at athletic parks and scattered through the pavilions. Hotels opened, cottagers arrived and throughout the city there was a stir that brought joy to the natives and quickened the early sojourners to a realization that summer had come.

There was nothing perfunctory about Asbury's opening today. It was a real the resort is preparing to entertain a record breaking throng.

Asbury has listed several other large conventions. The New Jersey State Dental Society will meet here as usual and the Civil War Veterans are to hold their annual State encampment here early in June.

Bathing began along the beach today. Undamaged by the severe storms last winter, the shore presented its familiar contour at the popular beaches, while in North Asbury the new concrete jetties driven this spring have in places built up twelve feet of beach.

The Lafayette Hotel opened on Thursday and to-day Proprietor C. Arthur Applegate threw open the doors of the Monmouth. The Plaza Hotel opened last week. At the Columbia Proprietor W. Harvey Jones is completing a $50,000 improvement and is getting ready for the reception of visitors next month.

Other hotel proprietors are preparing to open their houses soon. Indications are that the New Monterey will open in the middle of June. The week's arrivals include:

Metropolitan—Mr. and Mrs. William F. Hoppe and family, Mr. and Mrs. Wendell, Miss Kathryn C. Lennon, Miss Margaret Lennon, Miss Rose C. Palm, William Scherer, F. M. Finn, Miss R. E. Dougherty, Theodore Dougherty, W. H. Stockdale, F. Bradley Cox, Miss J. A. Welch and Miss E. J. Welch of New York.

unspoiled woods, winding river valleys, pleasant farming country, as well as hundreds of miles of seashore, level and sandy, such as the famous Long Beach, and rocky, broken into innumerable harbors, which delight the yachtsman. A practical aid to the prospective vacationist in finding the place suited to his needs and which the circumstances of his business render accessible to himself and his family is found in this publication, issued by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad.

A preface to the book gives a brief but comprehensive review of the variety of charms that southern New England offers—the coast of Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts, the quaint villages, islands, Martha's Vineyard, Nantucket and Block Island; the Berkshire and Littlefield Hills and the charming rural regions of inland Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. Under each resort point is listed the names of hotels, boarding cottages and farm houses where summer guests are entertained, with figures indicating the capacity and daily and weekly rates of each.

A feature of the book is a list of the various points of attraction—places noted for their historical associations, natural wonders of beautiful scenery. In connection with each place of interest is given the name of the nearest station of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad or of the Central New England Railway, as well as the mode of conveyance from the station. A list of more than eighty golf courses gives the names of the clubs owning them and the number of holes in each course.

A copy of the "Manual of Summer Resorts" will be sent on request to any address, by the Advertising Department, Room 706, Railroad Building, New Haven, Conn.

Memorial Day will be celebrated with a G. A. R. parade in the morning and a baseball game in the afternoon. Monday night there will be an informal hop at the Laurel House, closing with a midnight supper in the main grill.

The twenty-seventh annual meeting of the American Pediatric Society was brought to a close at the Laurel House Wednesday evening with a special dinner tendered the visiting doctors and their wives by the management. Dr. George M. Aker of Washington delivered the opening address on Monday, when more than fifty of the most prominent physicians in this country and Canada were assembled. Other reading papers were before the society by Dr. Thomas S. Southworth, Dr. Oscar Schloss, Dr. L. Emmett Holt and Dr. Henry Dwight Chapin of New York; Dr. H. O. Run of Cleveland, Dr. Charles Hunter Dunn of Boston, and Dr. Langley Porter of San Francisco.

Other doctors in attendance were: David Beavard, Jr., Augustus C. C. Walker, Lester Carr, Floyd Grandall, John Dornier, Rowland G. Freeman, Royal H. Haynes, Henry Helman, Charles Herrman, Raymond B. Hooley, Charles G. Keeley, Henry Kovik, L. E. La Petra, Frank S. Marks, William P. Northon, Godfrey R. Puck, Philip Van Ingen, Herbert B. Wilcox and J. E. Winters.

THE SMALL COLLEGE.

ELIHU ROOT'S ideas on the problem of small college or university education, and incidentally on the qualifications for a college professor, are contained in an article published in the Hamiltonian, the Hamilton College annual just issued.

"With all that the great university gains," Mr. Root writes, "it continually loses something with its growth, and this is what it loses—the personal touch and the development of character. It is something that only the small college can do, and only the small college with the right spirit."

The way to acquire and hold that spirit is through the proper conception of true education. Men should be trained broadly before being trained for vocation, Mr. Root believes. He gained his instruction at Hamilton and his years of public life have not changed his opinion. He gives the following words a broad application:

"Hamilton has the right spirit for a successful small college because she has held to the old faith. She has never sought to be a vocational institution. She doesn't teach men to be lawyers or doctors or clergymen or bankers or farmers. She is an educational institution."

"She seeks to train, to develop, to form, to educate youths to be men competent to fit themselves for any vocation. She has been kept true to her traditions by the strain of simple farmer boys plodding along over the hills to her examinations, by the great proportion of her students who come, not because they are sent or because it is the correct thing to do, but because they are eager to make their way in the world."

"Acquisition of wealth is not the primary thing in life, Mr. Root asserts. Instead simple, sincere lives are needed; lives which can be made happy by intellectual rather than financial tastes. This proposition he lays down in a description of his ideal professor. After naming a list of half a dozen Hamilton instructors of his own day, in which he includes his father, Oren Root, the former Senator says:

"Their students doubtless soon forgot the most of what they learned from book and lecture, but their habits never could escape the deep and lasting impression upon their characters, tastes and intellectual methods. These professors were poor as the world goes, but they had a wealth that money cannot create. They loved their subjects and were happy in their work."

"They rejoiced in the exercise of their powers. They were content with simple pleasures. They filled the atmosphere about them with an enthusiasm for learning and literature. They sought for truth as one who strives in a game. They never thought or talked about money or investments or profits. They took little heed of those things for which men are striving and wearing out their lives in the market places of a materialistic civilization."

"For a boy to live with such men," Mr. Root concludes, "to be close to them during four of the most important years of youth; to observe and become accustomed to their simple and sincere life, without money, made happy in the pleasures of the intellect and taste; to get their standards and become impressed by their estimates of the values of life, and to learn enough out of books in the meantime to understand it all—that is education beyond price."

LAKEWOOD, N. J.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., May 29.—When the Laurel House closes its doors Tuesday evening it will mark the end of the gayest social season Lakewood has had in many years. Owing to the tremendous increase in business here it is rumored there will be another big hotel erected before December. Report has it that a number of wealthy cottages
